

Summer in Stockholm

July 4 - August 12, 2011

This summer, join Stockholm University School of Business for our new international summer school. Students from select partner universities are invited to join us in Stockholm, Scandinavia's business and cultural hub, to learn about modern topics in business administration.

Three courses will be offered tuition-free to invited students from partner universities over the course of three two-week sessions. Students are welcome to register for one, two or all of the sessions.

July 4-15

Sweden and the Financial Crisis (6 ECTS)

Sweden was one of the few countries to escape the global financial crisis of 2008 relatively unscathed. Discuss the global forces behind financial crises and learn what makes the Swedish model strong.

Fraud is arguably the greatest unmanaged risk. How can managers protect the organization against themselves? We introduce theory and practice in this emerging field.

The trends of neoliberalism and globalization have changed the conditions of 'the Swedish model'. Examine the shifting motives for state-run enterprises and analyze the managerial struggle to fulfill the double mission of balancing social responsibility and profits.
